World Humanitarian Day

World humanitarian day is on 19th August. It is an international day dedicated to humanitarian workers and those who have lost their lives in humanitarian causes. It is a global celebration of helping people. In the last 5 years, the world has witnessed one crisis after the other such as civil wars, refugee crisis, climate change, natural disasters, food insecurity and most recently, the covid 19 global pandemic.

There are no proper records of the local aid workers who lost their lives while serving the communities at the most critical time. They left behind their vulnerable families. The humanitarian system functions largely because of these workers who are the real frontline workers. The humanitarian architecture needs to be fairer with them in observing World Humanitarian Day. It is critical to amplify the voices of local, indigenous communities and local actors such as local government and grassroots civil society organisations and activists.

Their inclusion is important, as they best understand the local context. They witness the social and economic impact of disasters on their societies and need to have a more central role in decision making on disaster management policies and interventions. We in our school could observe this day and honour our support in an appropriate manner.

My town My pride

Adirampattinam is a coastal town which is located in the tail end of Tanjore district. It has a vast historical background. Once Adirampattinam was one of the famous port of Chola kingdom. During the regime of Sarfoji Maharaja of Tanjore Adirampattinam port was the key point of international sea routes.

Although Adirampattinam is Muslim populated town, the people living in Adirampattinam are very friendly with neighbourhoods. Adirampattinam also known as Adirai, which means Tideless coast.

Being located in Mannar Bay surrounded by Mangrove trees which is called அலையாத்தி, its sea water has no much tides. So, people used to call it as Adirai. In Tamil language திரை means அலை, if an noun prefixed with அ becomes opposition. I.e. அலையற்ற, அதிரை.

Adirampattinam is both mixture of town and village. Its wealthy lands have agro and fisheries by nature. It is surrounded by Agni & Nasuvini rivers both are the branches of Cauvery river. Adirai people are spreaded all over the globe for earning and business. Hundreds of families are residing in US, UK and Gulf countries. We have sophisticated schools, college and the other facilities since 50 years. Our ancestors donated acres of land to public uses such as college hospital, police station and bus stand.

Adirampattinam is famous for charity and hospitality. We have both Islamic and state board educational institutes for girls. One is exclusively for orphans and poor. By considering its tradition, rich culture, economy and wealth, everyone who was born in Adirampattinam must feel proud. I can simply say My town ; My pride. i.e Adirampattinam.

Benefits of Reading Books

In modern times, many people have adopted the habit of reading books. There are different types of books namely Motivational, fiction, Non-fiction, Autobiography, Poetry, History, Self -help, Reference, Biography books and so on.

From each book we get different types of benefits. The first and foremost benefit of reading books is that ,it improves our knowledge in different ways. It reduces our stress levels. It keeps us calm and enthusiastic. An important aspect of reading habit is that we can develop our vocabulary. It also helps us to stay focused on whatever things we do. Last but not the least , it helps us to develop our writing skills.

Conclusion: “The more that you read ,the more things you’ll know. The more that you learn, the more places you’ll go”. This quote states that, the more books we read will gain more knowledge and the more that we learn ,it will make us reach a higher level.
